MR. GARD SAYS ITALIANS DO NOT WANT WAR

"The Italian common people," Mr. Homer Gard stated firmly in his sitting-room at the Seminole Hotel, "do not want war with Ethiopia or any other country! They were already taxed to the limit before this conflict, unable to make any profit in national trade. But Mussolini with an almost bankrupt nation and a dissatisfied populace on his hands, had to go to war to retain his power. Once he has Ethiopia, Italy will do no more nor less with it than with Italian Somaliland."

Mr. Gard, one of the forty-two directors of the board of the United States Chamber of Commerce and sole owner-publisher of The Hamilton Journal and The Hamilton Daily News, Hamilton, Ohio, traveled this past summer in Italy. Curious to know the opinions of the Italian people, he questioned waiters, tradesmen, the men in the

The Jacksonville Journal said of her: "Miss Cox is a violinist whose interpretations have rare and original charm. She is sure and true in attack, and her technique is fine. She plays with the enjoyment in

"Amy Lowell, A Chronicle," a recent publication by S. Foster Damon, was reviewed by Jessie Rittenhouse Scollard, whose personal acquaintance with the eccentric leader of the Free Verse movement gave opportunity for authoritative criticism and emphasis on the essentials in her career.

As a background to her subject, Mrs. Scollard described the free verse era from its start in 1912,

The high spot of Winter Park's season of artistic entertainments will be reached next Friday evening when the world-famous violin virtuoso Zimbalist will be heard in recital at the Annie Russell Theatre. She organized the Professional Artists Series and brought here some of the leading celebrities of the time.

DR. CHALMERS' EULOGY FOR KING GEORGE V

"King George was not one of England's great kings but he was one of the best!" said Dr. Chalmers, in opening his lecture Monday. "If, during the reign of George the V, there had been a man of Hitler's temperament, or Mussolini or Roosevelt on the throne of England in those precarious and anxious years, the crown might have tipped a bit! His death has done much for world peace. There has even now come a message from Mussolini bearing the sympathy of

"GIVE JAPAN SQUARE DEAL IN PHILIPPINES FOR SQUARE DEAL IN CHINA," SAYS DR. MARTIN

Speaking on the subject of "The Philippines," Dr. John Martin addressed an overflow audience. Beginning with the turn of the century when the United States reluctantly began its policy of democratic imperialism, Dr. Martin traced the history of the Philippines in relation to American government and American politics. The speaker stated that no matter how well governed they are, the governed are always dissatisfied! Philippine commissioners repeated in Congress halls ad nauseum, "...we don't want good government, we want self-government!" Thus, pushed on by the farm lobbies, a constitution of the Philippines was written, approved presidentially and passed, resulting in the inauguration this past month of the first president of the Philippine Commonwealth.

"Retaining full authority to discharge our responsibility in the islands, the Philippines now have the invitation to govern themselves wisely and well under the parental wing of the United States," said John Martin, and added that their treasury was in excellent condition, "...the United States doing for other countries what it cannot do for itself!"

"The problem challenging the statesmanship between Japan, the United States and the Philippines is the legitimate use of the islands by the Japanese for trade and immigration," Dr. Martin continued. "We should encourage the Japanese to settle there and distinguish between Japanese immigrants and the Japanese government! With political isolation assured, the economic isolation should be deprecated. This could be put to great use in Western Pacific negotiations, giving Japan a square deal in the Philippines in return for a square deal in China. We will insist on a fair field without favor. This is a question which might be settled by business men, competing not with battleships but with price-lists. Guns are bad salesmen! Brains produce and sell goods!"

NOTED ENGINEER AT VIRGINIA INN

Frederick Darlington, noted consulting and electrical engineer, when asked his opinion of the Florida shipping canal now under construction, promptly told the Topics reporter an amusing incident of borrowing a Standard Oil official's silk hat in Yokohama in order to attend the Emperor's garden fete.

Evidently the transflorida big ditch is in small favor among engineers!

Mr. Darlington has engineered in many countries. Among the first to cooperate with George Westinghouse in the early development of electricity, he aided in uniting hydraulic and electrical power. During the Great War, he served as chairman of the power section of the War Industries Board with Bernard M. Baruch. As consultant, Mr. Darlington serves as advisor to financial concerns interested in investing American capital in foreign countries and also as advisor to foreign capital interested in American industries. At present he and Mrs. Darlington are guests at the Virginia Inn.

The reporter asked Mr. Gard something of the function of the United States Chamber of Commerce. "We meet in Washington," he explained, "and discuss problems of national significance. Non-political as a group, we send out to the some five thousand affiliated local chambers referendums asking them to put these national problems before their members and return a vote of 'Yes' or 'No' to the Washington office within thirty days. When the returns come in, the votes are tabulated and the majority of favor or non-favor placed before the United States Congress. Last year we sent out about six referendums, costing us approximately $3200 each. Just at present, a referendum has been out about two weeks to the thousands of local chambers asking for an answer on the question of "Shall national relief expenditure be curtained?"

For fourteen years Mr. Gard has been spending three months of the winter in Winter Park. He was "born a Baptist and a Democrat," but is limited by no one religious creed or political party in his beliefs. Born a Baptist, as he says with a twinkle in his eye, his mother became a Presbyterian, in college he joined the Congregational Church and he married a Universalist! Having come to Winter Park fourteen years ago in a wheel chair, aftermath of a serious surgical operation, Mr. Gard today is the picture of health. Undoubtedly due to the aggregate of fifty-two months of Florida sunshine!

the Italian people to the mourning Britons."

In terse, thought-provoking sentences, Dr. Chalmers traced the political drama in pre-war Russia and the Balkans from the 1870's down to the time of the tragedy occurring in Sarajevo. He read letters exchanged between "Willy" Hohenzollern and "Nicky" Romanoff, last of the Kaisers and last of the Czars. Rapidly he sketched in the background of a Europe preparing for the conflagration to come, resulting from the assassination of the heir to the Austrian throne, Franz Ferdinand, Archduke of Austria.

Dr. Chalmers' next lecture will be February 3rd, at 11 a. m., "The Sad Blunder of 1914."

"Humanity is not a thing to apologize over!" Dr. Chalmers said emphatically after his talk. "True historians, researchers or lecturers, thrill and throb to the human interest in history! History is, after all, made by human beings and documents are important only so long as they recognize the human element."

MRS. SCOLLARD TELLS OF AMY LOWELL

(Continued from page 1) when Harriet Monroe launched "Poetry, A Magazine of Verse," and Ezra Pound began the "Imagist" school. She told of Miss Lowell's connection with the latter movement, and how she crossed swords with Ezra Pound, and brought the group of young Imagist writers back from England and gathered their writings into a collection, published in 1915.

Mrs. Scollard dismissed as unimportant the "legend" about Amy's black cigars, the seven sheep dogs, and the bath-tub poem, declaring that her great personality would rise above the small matter of unconventionality.

"Amy Lowell was a great heroic spirit," the speaker concluded, "travelling all over the country spreading the gospel of her art, while suffering great physical pain, but free verse died with her in 1925, although the Poetry Society of America acclaimed her great personality at their annual dinner in 1920 when the whole company rose to pay her honor. Her work is denied continuance because of its lack of universality and her contention for form, but her monumental biography of Keats may survive."

Mrs. Scollard read as examples of Miss Lowell's verses, "Venus Transiens," "A Lady," "The Madonna of the Evening Flowers," and "Patterns," a widely quoted poem, and perhaps her best, which the author said was better interpreted by Mrs. Scollard's reading than her own.

Dr. Earl Fleischmann, of Rollins College, read the contributed poems, written by Alice Howie Booth, Stella Weston Tuttle, Carolyn Heine, Frances Perpente, James Still, Olcott Hawthorne Deming, Vivian Larramore, Isabel Fiske Conant, Charles H. Stone, and the contributor of the poem, "House of Calvin," which received the winning vote, to be held for the Allied Arts Prize Poem contest.

On Monday afternoon, February 3rd, Mrs. Scollard will speak on the Life of Vachel Lindsay, by Edgar Lee Masters.

The New Orleans colonial type residence recently completed on Georgia Avenue, Winter Park, for Mr. and Mrs. William Chart Sanders.

THE SANDERS RESIDENCE

The inspiration for the design of the Sanders house comes from the old New Orleans houses built by retired French traders. This type is also found in other tropical and semi-tropical countries; its overhanging balconies forming protection from burning sun and tropical rains.

Doors and windows are placed to gain the maximum amount of circulation of air, and every room in the house has cross ventilation.

To insure privacy for the occupants, the kitchen and garage are placed on the street side and the living room and dining room open onto a walled garden at the back.

In keeping with the spirit of the originals, the house is wall papered inside in attractive patterns. One of the interior features is the round dining room, which is a perfect circle, having the doors and windows each on axis of the room. Two handsome built-in semi-circular china cabinets and a cornice molding complete the room.

Throughout the construction, specially treated wood and other preventive methods against rot and termites were used, as have been developed by Mr. Rogers in research work in cooperation with the Federal Government. Mr. Rogers' methods of termite control have been featured in architectural journals and are recognized as being the best preventive methods known today.

The Architectural Record, published by F. W. Dodge Corporation, New York, is featuring this house in their April issue.

The following firms took part in the construction of the Sanders house:

- Millwork—Winter Park Mill and Cabinet Co.

RECOVERY CALLS FOR BRIGHT COLORED CARS

"Color is synonymous with prosperity!" announced Herbert Thompson Strong, color expert and world authority on the chemistry and physics of color, in his Maitland home. "Have you noted the increase in gray and black cars during the depression years? Color feeds the emotions. With the return of prosperity comes again the vogue for brightly colored cars."

Mr. Strong began designing fabrics and color aesthetics for motor cars when the horseless carriages first emerged from their chrysalis. For many years, while working for Cadillac, Packard, and General Motors, Mr. Strong went to nature's birds, butterflies, minerals, jewels, corals for the motifs. Fifteen years ago when Edsel Ford asked him, "Strong, just what is color?" he was unable to answer the question and became determined to find out the meaning of color's magic. Since then he has worked in research and now with the use of the ultra-violet ray and polarized light he shares his color-world of magical beauty from the lecture platform. This past year Mr. Strong worked with Dr. Lucius Beebe in "going below" to study on the sea bottom the color and beauty of marine life, the fish, the corals and sea-growth.

Herbert Thompson Strong's lecture on "Revelations In The Realm of Color" will be one of the series of Tuesday Evening Lectures of the Woman's Union of the Congregational Church.

Fifty-six years ago, when a boy of eleven years old, Mr. Strong came to Maitland. This special designer of the interior and exterior decorations and color effects of custom-built cars remembers Winter Park as not existing at all! He hunted quail with his dogs through what is now Park avenue. And the business section of Orlando revolved around three log stores selling hay, fertilizer and general merchandise.—M. H.

The Child Study Group of the A. A. U. W. will meet next Thursday at 8:30 with Mrs. Guy Waddington, 1630 Aloma avenue. Prof. Bailey spoke on "Fear" at the last meeting, and next week the members will continue that discussion.

DR. BURTON TELLS OF TWENTY NEW NOVELS

"I'm not embarrassed by the list I have before me of twenty new novels of the month, the season, the year... I'm paralyzed!" Dr. Richard Burton exclaimed to the amusement of his audience at the All Saints' Parish House attending the third of the Burton-Scollard Lecture Series. "You know, balanced rations in novel reading include the old as well as the new, but here they are..." and Dr. Burton swung into an hour of fiction-criticism which for its wit and humor was unsurpassed by any Winter Park lectures, keeping the group chuckling with delight.

Taking his listeners rapidly behind the scenes of the novels of the twelvemonth, Dr. Burton considered in turn Warwick Deeping's "The Golden Cord," "White Ladies" by Francis Brett Young, "We The Accused" by Raymond, Bess Streeter Aldrich's "Spring Comes On Forever," "It Can't Happen Here!" by Sinclair Lewis, Briffault's unnecessarily obscene "Europa," "Vein of Iron" by Ellen Glasgow, Dr. A. J. Cronin's "The Stars Look Down," Willa Cather's "Lucy Gayheart," "Cross of Peace" by Philip Gibbs, "Solomon, My Son" by Erskine, Irving Bachelier's "Oxen of The Sun," "Illyrian Spring" by Ann Bridge, "Silas Crockett" by Mary Ellen Chase, Stark Young's "Feliciana," Kantor's "Voice of Bugle Ann," "Master Sanguine" by Ivor Braun, Helen Ashton's "Dust On The Ruins," and last and most important, "The "Last Puritan" by George Santayana, seventy-year-old philosopher, calling it a memoir in the form of a novel. Incidentally, "The Last Puritan" makes its first public appearance at booksellers February 1st. Dr. Burton aroused much mirth and appreciation over his advance criticism and prophecy of a book-to-come.
